Men's Quarters. The Royal Military Hospital (established 1682) and traditionally ascribed to the good nature of Nell Gwynne, the pretty and witty Orange Girl, occupies the site of an olden building "King James' Colledge at Chelsey," founded in 1618 by Sutcliffe, Dean of Exeter. The East and West Courts of the Hospital (designed by Wren) contain the men's quarters. Here they can sit and read at leisure or walk to and fro when wind and rain batter the founder's brass statue in the Main Court.

(FOR ADDRESS ONLY.)
